

ABSTRACT

The present disclosure relates to a method for producing a resulting image from a plurality of individual images. The method includes producing a plurality of individual images using a scanning movement, and offsetting the individual images
5 in relation to each other. The method further includes obtaining image information from the individual images according to the offsetting, and producing the resulting image using the obtained image information.